Exploring Adult Learning Principles for Teacher and Administration Application

Course Syllabus

Course Description
The purpose of this professional development course is to recognize that learning is the acquisition of information, knowledge, and skills. The process of learning is an ongoing process that takes place throughout life, formally in the classroom, and informally through experience. In this course, you will explore the assumptions of adult learning theory, the principles of practice, and investigate the differences between pedagogy and andragogy. Practical strategies and methods of application will be offered, with approaches for modifications.

Course Objectives
At the end of this course you should be able to:

1. Identify the fundamental tenets of adult learning theory and practice.
2. Identify the key elements of adult development theory.
3. Identify key elements of constructivism, social cognitive theory, and cognitivism.
4. Identify key elements of behaviorism, humanism, and transformative learning.
5. Identify key elements of McClusky's Theory of Margin and how that theory relates to motivation toward learning and personalized learning.
6. Identify the key elements and benefits of metacognition, reflection, and transformative learning.
7. Identify key elements in creating self-directed and engaging work for middle school and high school students.
