TRIO Talent Search Eligibility

Is the student first-generation?

Students are considered First-Generation if neither biological parent has completed a 4-year degree (i.e. Bachelors Degree).

FAQ's About First-Generation

1. Am I still FG (First-Generation) even though my siblings went to college?

For TRIO eligibility, you are still considered first-generation EVEN if your siblings graduated with a Bachelor's Degree. TRIO only looks at your biological parents' education level.

2. What if my parent(s) attended college, but did not graduate or they are still attending college?

If they did not graduate, then you are still first-generation. You will be considered first-generation until either parent graduates with a Bachelor's Degree.

3. What if my parent(s) attended college and graduated with a certificate or an Associates Degree?

You would still be considered first-generation. It is only when parent/s receive a 4-year degree that the TRIO student is no longer considered first-generation

4. What if my biological parent(s) received a four year degree, but do not use it?

Unfortunately, under TRIO guidelines, you would not be considered first-generation.
